RIGHT OF SEARCH.

OFFICERS OF THE LAW are prone to arrogate to themselves too much authority in the performance of their duty. They are so accustomed to dealing with criminals that they are apt to overleap the limit of the law and treat all men as criminals before they are even accused. The finger of suspicion may point very close to an offender but it is dangerous pastime to go on the assumption that a suspect is a convict. In the cases of well known desperadoes the action of making an arrest without warrant may be condoned for the good of the community but, even then, every officer recognizes the fact that, unless he has the drop on the subject of arrest, he is liable to suffer for his temerity in invading the retreat of the persons he thinks guilty of an infraction of the law. Under the law a man is entitled to defend his home which the courts have rightfully defined as his castle where an intruder may be treated as a trespasser. These facts are recalled by the activity of the state police in holding up automobiles without any search warrant more than a John Doe capias which is not always at hand and which the courts do not recognize as covering specific charges or the mere suspicion of wrongdoing. Where the question of law has been raised in other states in relation to arresting owners of automobiles, the highest courts have decided that an automobile is as much a part of his home as a bed, and therefore, is covered by the same statutes applying to an invasion of the owner's fireside. These courts have thrown out the contention that an automobile carrying the owner is a common carrier and therefore subject to the law of search without any excuse beyond the possibility that investigation may disclose the owner to be a lawbreaker and amenable to arrest. The matter was threshed out to a fine thread in the Supreme Court of the state of Michigan, where an injunction against the state police was issued prohibiting them from interfering with automobiles traveling along the highways on the suspicion that they were carrying spirituous liquors into Michigan. The Wolverine state, after adopting a bone dry prohibition law, instructed its officers to enforce the drastic provisions of that statute by searching every vehicle entering Michigan from the adjoining states. This order was enforced without discrimination until it provoked a protest from the owners of automobiles who could not drive from any town in Ohio without being subject to delays on the road. The enforcement became such a persecution that the automobile owners questioned the authority of the officers by seeking relief through the courts. The lower courts ruled in favor of the police, and when the appeal was heard by the Supreme Court that body almost unanimously decided that no officer was empowered to interfere with state or interstate traffic in the hope of detecting carriers of contraband. The opinion set forth at length that no John Doe warrants applied, that the right of search had been abused and that a man's automobile or carriage was as much part of his home as his other furniture. This put a stop to the searching and furnished a precedent for other states to follow. If the Supreme Court of Nevada were appealed to the members would probably affirm that finding and free motorists from the harassments that are growing entirely too common in this section.

JESS WILLARD AS A SLACKER.

JESS WILLARD is not popular with the men who fought or who offered their services as part of the fighting forces of Uncle Sam. This fact was brought out conspicuously by the action of the Nevada chapter of the Legion of War Veterans at their recent meeting in Reno, where they adopted resolutions urging the mayor and authorities of Toledo to stop the big boxing event from being pulled off on the Fourth of July. This action will meet with the approval of every right-minded citizen who has regarded with amazement the ruling of the provost marshal's department that the big fellow was engaged in farming and therefore entitled to a respite from the service. There were lots of other boys engaged in the same occupation who never asked or expected any release from their obligation as citizens and the exemption board must have known that in the case of Willard farming was the smallest part of his business. His real occupation was posing in a circus where he entertained the Rubes with three-minute bouts with a boxing partner for which he received every month a salary that amounted to more than the gross proceeds of his farm or ranch. The sentiment of the country is expressed in the resolutions adopted by the Nevada chapter and it is hoped that the appeal of the boys from the sagebrush will bring the Toledo authorities to a recognition of the rights of those who serve with the colors and who are insulted by the presence of the overgrown coward in a public demonstration on the day made sacred to the cause of liberty. Willard is after the money and it was the grasping nature of the fellow that actuated him to show his yellow streak at 30 a month and dodge the draft when so many other first-class men of the roped arena boldly volunteered their services without waiting for conscription or any pressure to force them into the army or navy.

If a fellow is against the stars and stripes, cut out the stars and let him have the stripes.

"I insist that if there is anything which it is the duty of the whole people never to intrust to any hand but their own, that thing is the preservation and perpetuity of their own liberties and institutions."—Abraham Lincoln.

Referring to the proposed formation of a national organization of veterans of the world war, later accomplished at St. Louis, Democratic National Chairman Homer S. Cummings said: "It is to laugh." We advise all Democratic politicians to laugh now. They will never have another chance.

"The Brand," greatest of all Rex Beach thrillers, will be the special attraction at the Butler today. The genius of Rex Beach never was more compellingly demonstrated than in the newest of his famous books to find picturization on the screen. "The Brand," widely known because of the thrilling nature of the story, its superb character drawing and the popularity of the locale, Alaska, is always fertile ground to Rex Beach. Produced for Goldwyn and following closely on the success of "Laughing Bill Hyde" and "Too Fat to Fight," "The Brand" comes when Rex Beach productions is at its height. The story is one of great power and appeal. It is a drama from the first scene. The scenes are laid in Alaska. It grips and thrills as the four principal characters begin to weave their net of love, hate, passion and rebellion, and does not end until the very last scene, when occurs a climax of such terrific power that the spectator can only wonder how Rex Beach conceived anything so extraordinary. Magnificent Alaska scenes are shown, with raging blizzards, chasms of ice and frozen rivers. It is told in seven thrilling reels and is sure to please all who see it.

Added to the program, the latest Pathe News, Tomorrow, Tox Mix, in "Mr. Logan, U. S. A." a regular Tom Mix thriller, a Ford educational weekly, Mutt and Jeff comedy and a Pathe Review, something entirely new and very interesting.

BRITISH TIRED OF RATIONING

(Correspondence Associated Press).

LONDON, May 6.—Nearly every one in England has changed butchers in the past few weeks or is doing so now.

When strict rationing was in force each householder was compelled to register with one butcher and buy all meat from him. People were standing in line for the butcher's supplies, his hoppers were cleaned every day before his customers could get what they wanted, and he was irritated at price and allotment. A few sharp words and soon the butcher and the consumer were hardly on speaking terms. This went on during the war because the butcher if he had meat was forced to supply the registrant, he could not overcharge him and the registrant was forced to purchase from that butcher.

The result was that when the government decided householders could register with another firm nearly everybody did. They all calculated they could not injure their position.

Since yesterday the consumer is no longer required to give coupons for meat, butter and sugar. The grocer and the butcher still is rationed, however, and they deal out to their customers about the same amount delivered to them when coupons were required. The supplies to the retailers are rapidly being increased. The food ministry promises that it will not be long until one of the most necessary but most irksome systems of the war will have ended and the coupon book be discarded.

Marble Caves of Oregon.

Amid the wilds of southwestern Oregon, almost unknown to the world at large, is situated a series of underground chambers and passages remarkable for their size and for the beauty and unusual character of their decorations, says F. E. Tuck in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Within the last few years they have been made a national monument and are now known as the Marble Caves of Oregon.

Horses Knew Allotted Task.

In the mines of Hainault horses that travel back and forth over a certain road exactly thirty times each day go to the stables of their own accord after their last trip, and refuse to take another step. In Montaigne's Essays it is stated that the oxen employed in the royal gardens of Susa for turning the wheels to which the water pails were attached refused to make more than the hundred rounds that constituted their daily task.

challenging the winner of the McDevitt versus Trounce bout was read from the ring the other evening and he has written friends here expressing his willingness to pay his own fare to Tonopah if given a chance to show his wares before a local audience.

Leonard is the kind of ringman that ought to appeal to the lovers of boxing that support the game here. He is the type that is willing to take several to give one. In Sacramento a while back he gave Champion Benny Leonard a merry time of it. The sport scribes of San Francisco speak very well of this lad and it may be that over the long route as permitted in the "Sage Brush" he may show qualities that will land him at the top of the heap in the realm of pugilism.

Jack Downey, the bald-headed middleweight has found a backer in the person of Harry Shepman of the Frisco Cafe. Harry casually opines that he will wager a thousand fish that his protege can beat any middleweight that can be dug up.

GOLD IN THE CONGO

(Correspondence Associated Press)
BRUSSELS, May 1.—The Belgian colonial office has received word of recent important discoveries by gold prospectors in the Telle district (Belgian Congo) belonging to the Belgian state.

FLU IN THE CONGO

(Correspondence Associated Press)
BRUSSELS, April 27.—Persons arriving here from the Congo say that Spanish influenza has played havoc among the population of the Belgian Congo territories. Many villages have lost nearly one-half of their inhabitants.

Old Story Disproved.

Most persons know the story told of Cleopatra, to illustrate her luxurious habits of living, that she dissolved in her wine a precious pearl. No one seems yet to have questioned what must have been the effect upon the drink, but scientists scoff at the possibility of such solution. The fact is pearls are not soluble in wine. The most powerful vinegar affects them slowly and never entirely dissolves them, for the organic matter remains behind in the shape of a spongy mass that is larger than the original pearl.

Jews in New York's East Side. The lower East side of New York is made up of many races, but the Jews predominate. They come from all quarters of the globe to find a home in New York's most crowded spot.

Penalty for Disobedience. Obedience is economy, disobedience, extravagance. He who disobeys the laws of nature has a doctor's bill to pay. He who disobeys the laws of his country has a lawyer's bill to pay.
